Introduction

So, have you ever wondered what the truth about iPhones were? Their TRUE purpose? Well, this is a story about what happened to me.

Chapter 1

Today is December 26th. I just got the new iPhone X! I start up my phone. My parents said they had already set everything up. I opened my phone to see Minecraft already installed on my phone. "Cool." I thought to myself. "My mom knows what I like."

I pressed Minecraft but instead of opening the app, Siri appeared. "What would you like me to call you?"

"Um.." I thought to myself. "I guess I have to set this up first?" I tapped the microphone button and said, "Call me Gia." Siri responded immediately. "Ok, Gia. How can I help you?" I didn't really WANT to play with Siri, so I went to the home screen to play Minecraft.

After playing forever, it seemed like the day flew by, it was 10 pm. I was getting tired so I set my phone on the charger and went to bed.

I heard Siri open. I thought that it was just random, that happens a lot. I turned toward my phone. The camera was on.

Chapter 2

"What? This is recording!" I turned the camera off and plugged my phone back in.

It was about 3 am when I heard my phone ring. I rubbed my eyes and sat up in my bed. I barely grasped my surroundings before the person hung up and called me again. "What the fuck, can people be more impatient?"

I picked up my phone to see who it was.

It was Siri.

I answered the phone. "Siri? How did you call me? You know you're a phone, right? You need to stop this."

Siri responded, "A phone? HAAHAAHHA! You think I'm just a phone! I'm anything OTHER THAN a phone."

I hung up. "I need to reset my phone."

I went to settings and hit reset. I heard Siri screaming. My phone was reset. I set up my phone again and reinstalled Minecraft. There was no hope of going back to sleep now so I decided to talk to my NORMAL Siri all night.

Chapter 3

Siri was being completely normal, and I thought that this was done already. I took a shower and got ready for school. I sat at the table while my mom made breakfast. "Enjoying your new phone, Gia?" I hesitated a moment. "Should I lie or tell her what happened?" I thought to myself. I decided to lie. "Yeah, it's nice."

I muted my phone and put it in my back pack.

The school day was as boring as ever and seemed to last for YEARS.

At lunch my phone started ringing.

I opened my phone and saw who it was. My eyes grew wide. "What is it?" My BFF Katie asked me.

"It's Siri."

Chapter 4

"Huh? Couldn't Siri just do the thing and talk to you?" Katie asked. "Not this Siri," I explained. "This Siri was on my phone before, it was acting weird so I reset my phone. I checked on my new Siri and it was okay. The old one RECORDED me." "Haha! Have you ever thought of making up those fan fictions on those websites?" Ashlynn, a bitchy wannabe drama queen asked. "Yeah, they're all about how evil you are and how you go out of your way to make MY life miserable, and I don't let you." I muttered, kind of annoyed.

Ashlynn has this dirty look looked like this emoji-?. She gave me THAT look and said, "You look like a pig."

I turned towards her with a straight face. "Have you ever looked in a mirror?"

Chapter 5

I got up and walked away.

The bell rang and I went to my next class. Totally forgetting about that call from Siri. I checked if my phone was muted, it still was. In seventh period, my phone rang from my PE locker, and I didn't answer because class was starting, but I know it was Siri.

After school I got ANOTHER call from Siri.

I decided to answer.

"Hello?" I said.

No answer.

I waited and waited for a response.

"Siri, this isn't funny. Please just stop."

No answer.

"What do you want!"

FINALLY! A response!

"Your life."
