Introduction

Dendyn is a fictional story about two childhood friends who end up falling in love with each other despite the obstacles. It is a story of love, courage and friendship.

Chapter 1

Hello, my name is Kady. I am a female minor. I'm not going to tell you my age cause it changes throughout the story and it would just be very confusing. Back in kindergarten I met a girl named Denise. We soon became best friends. We went on through elementary and we had every class together. In 3rd grade we met a girl named Hazel. Denise decided to make her our new friend. The year after that we met another girl named Xerenity. Denise decided to be friends with her too. That very same year me and Denise dated for about 3 months until she thought it was too weird and broke up with me. In 5th grade Hazel and Xerenity started to form their own relationship. I and Denise were both proud of and surprised by them two. During the summer after 5th grade Xerenity moved to a different town and Hazel went to a different school. Although I and Denise were devastated, there was nothing we could do. We accepted the facts and looked at the bright side of things, at least we were going to the same middle school and we had three classes together. A lot of classmates from elementary went to the same school as us, and we even made new friends. I and Xerenity kept in touch although I and Hazel didn't talk as often. Denise couldn't really talk with either of them do to the fact that she broke her phone and she didn't have their numbers. Xerenity told me she was dealing with some stuff and started to harm herself and I was shocked when she told me but she said she quickly veered off of that path. She had gotten a tattoo, which also surprised me. She told me her relationship with Hazel was stronger than ever, even though they lived in completely different cities. When she mentioned her and Hazel's relationship, it reminded me of when me and Denise dated and I kind of wanted to date her again.

Chapter 2

Not too soon, school started up again and what was even worse was that I was starting middle school. In T.V shows, middle school is described as the most awkward time of your life. On the first day I had lost my schedule and had to remember what my schedule was. The first day wasn't that bad. I met new friends and saw old ones. What I was most excited about was seeing Denise again. Over the summer Denise visited San Diego so I couldn't really get to see her. On the first day, I got to see Denise again and man did she look good. I mean it was probably just because I liked her, but she did look good. The next couple of weeks were normal but on like the 5th week I saw a cool little thing where you write down a math equation and ask the person you like if they can solve it and when they hesitate you say "Here if we erase this it's easier to solve." and then when you erase that bit it says "I Love You" so I decided to do the same thing with Denise. The next day I did it and she didn't really react to it. I wasn't really sad or mad about it but it wasn't quite the reaction I thought she would give me. I mean I wasn't expecting her to hug me, especially since she didn't like hugs. I wasn't expecting her to slap me since she wasn't really the type to do that. She's more of the chill, laid back kind of person, although she can be mean and scary if she needs to or wants to. That's kind of why I love her. I have plenty of reasons to love her, but my top three are 1. Her personality. She is the embodiment of nice but she can be scary. 2. Her looks. To others she may not look like perfection but she looks like perfection to me, I like her glasses most and her short hair. I just really like short hair. 3. She likes me (as a friend) for who I am. Although you probably guessed it, I am a lesbian. Denise is perfectly fine with that, she used to be bi then asexual then pan-sexual. I'm glad she likes me for me unlike my gay/lesbian hating father, although he doesn't know about me.

Chapter 3

During the first few weeks of middle school, I and Denise only had one person say that we should get together, where as in 5th grade we were bombarded with people saying we would be a good couple. And every time, I agreed with them. Denise didn't. She thought dating her best friend and dating at a young age was weird. She said you should start dating in like 7th grade, says the person who dated me for three months in 4th grade. And that pretty much brings us to the present. So without further ado, let's begin. "Hey Kady.", says Denise. "Yeah", I replied. "Wasn't that Language Arts project due today?", "Yup. You forgot, didn't you?", "Yes.", she said with a nervous smile. "You're lucky that lunch only just began and you have Language Arts after this.", "Yeah, I guess I am.". As we headed to the line for lunch I started to daydream about me and Denise. Once we were about to get lunch, Denise snapped me out of it. "You good bro?", " Huh? Oh! Yeah, just thinking about stuff.". We got our lunch and went to sit down. We sat down and ate our lunch. We talked about My Hero Academia and FNAF and all that kind of stuff. After we finished our lunch, we went outside where it was raining. Denise loved the rain so she twirled around in it for a little bit, while I sat there and watched her and imagined what it would be like if we were dating again. A minute into my thoughts and Denise grabs my hand and pulls me into the rain. She basically forced me to twirl in the rain. I guess without her I wouldn't be complete.

Chapter 4

Denise twirled me around in the rain and after a little bit I told her to stop cause I was getting dizzy. Once she stopped me I just stood there and looked up. I knew that without Denise I would just be a sad, emo loaf of garbage that hated the world. Then Denise came over to me and hugged me. She HUGGED me! She hates hugs and all of a sudden she hugs me as if it were no big deal! I mean I didn't complain because it was a nice hug like she buried her face into my shoulder as if we were a couple. After the surprise feeling went away, I wrapped my arms around her buried my face into her shoulder. We stood there for minutes, doing nothing but hugging each other. A couple of our old classmates and friends looked at us, pointed at us and went, "OOOHHHHH!", and told others. Eventually Denise pulled away from the hug and we did one of those couple hugs before the couple kisses. We starred into each others eyes while others took pictures. 5 seconds later and we quickly pull away from each other and did one of those awkward back-of-the-neck rubs. During that moment, I felt at ease. I felt good, calm even. I don't know if that was a sign or just a kinda awkward, kinda romantic moment between two friends. Either way, it was a nice moment.

Chapter 5

From that moment, everybody thought we were a couple. We had to tell them that we weren't a couple but they always pulled up the photos of us and used it as proof against us. Even when we told them it was just a little moment, they made a big deal about it. Some people even made fan fictions, fan art and YouTube videos about us. Old classmates and friends gave us thumbs up and proud looks when we passed them in the hall. Homophobic people looked at us and gave a frightened look or an angry look. Other couples saw us and snarled because we were, somehow, more famous than them. Teachers didn't really know so they didn't give us any talks or looks or signals. Denise and I mostly tried to ignore them. Sometimes they would try to make us see their reaction to us but we just walked passed them. I kinda like that everybody thought we were a couple, but I wished we were actually were a couple.

Chapter 6

I told Xerenity about it and she laughed then asked if it actually happened. I told her that all of it actually happened and I could imagine her jaw dropping. She asked if me and Denise were a couple and told her a million times, no. She asked why Denise hugged me and I told her I didn't know. I also told Xerenity that I liked that moment with Denise and Xerenity understood me. She told me about the romantic moments she had with Hazel and that she always liked those moments. I told her it was different for me cause me and Denise weren't a couple. She told me that anyone who has that kind of moment with someone else either they are a couple or they should be. I asked her how me and Denise would ever work out as a couple again and all she said was that destiny is destiny and fate is fate. I told her, unless you change it.

Chapter 7

I went back to school the next day and Denise wasn't there so I went on though out the day and hoped Denise would show up. Without Denise there, it was boring and I had nobody to talk to, except for the occasional, " Hello", from passing people. The entire day, Denise didn't show up what so ever. I went home that day and called Xerenity and told her about my day and that Denise didn't show up. She told me not to worry and that Denise probably had an appointment and just didn't want to come to school. I believed her and went to sleep. The next morning Denise still wasn't at school so I went on through the day. I called Xerenity and told her and she said that Denise was probably just sick or something. I trusted her word and fell asleep for the next day of school.

Chapter 8

I woke up the next morning and got ready for school. I made it to my bus stop early so I pulled out my iPod and listened to Cavetown and I read a book titled Lemonade Mouth. When my bus arrived I went to the back of the bus instead of the front. On my way to the back lots of people gave me rude looks and rude gestures and only a few people just ignored me. I sat down and waited to arrive at school. My bus normally is able to fit two to a seat but nobody wanted to sit next to me so some people sat three to a seat. When I arrived at school Denise still wasn't there. I waited the entire day but there was no sign of Denise and I couldn't call her because she had broke her phone. I started to worry a little bit about her, even though Xerenity told me not to.

Chapter 9

For the next week or so Denise didn't show up at school. I started to worry something was wrong with her. Did she move without telling me? Did she end up in the hospital in a coma and nobody told me? Did she die! Or had she just had enough with the couple thing? It was probably the last one considering she hated that kind of stuff. With every passing day, I got more and more worried about what might have happened to her.

Chapter 10

Finally, one week after Denise had disappeared, she showed up at school. When I saw her I told her that she better have had a good reason to be gone for a week. All she said was, " Well, I've been doing some thinking about all this couple stuff," " Yeah, and what about it.", I said, showing a bit of excitement, " I have thought that what if,... what if we got back together again.". She had said the last part a bit fast but I was able to understand it. " It took you a week to figure that out.", I said that part a bit harsh, but I brought Denise into a big, caring hug, " Oh you. Ever since we broke up in 4th grade I've wanted to get back together. Denise, I love you.", as soon as those words came out of my mouth I pulled Denise into a tender kiss. It was me and Denise's first kisses. I didn't regret anything. " Kady, I,... I", " Oh shut up and kiss me again.". She surprisingly listened to me and kissed me again. Of course, everybody took pictures of us and told everybody else. That moment felt good. Better than all the other good moments I had ever had.

Chapter 11

This time our relationship lasted longer than three months. We went on as a couple throughout 6th grade. We still got the same looks from the usual people but if they were negative, we just ignored them. The teachers, one by one, found out and only one or two didn't support us, but all the others did. It felt great to, not only, show my true self, but also dating Denise felt great. I love dating her. She's so sweet and nice and caring and it's just amazing!

Chapter 12

Denise helped me build up the courage to come out to my parents. As I mentioned earlier my dad didn't like homosexual people, so when I came out to him, he demanded that I pack up my stuff and leave. My mom was ok with me and she tried to stop my dad, but it didn't work. I went and packed up my stuff and luckily Denise was there and she kept apologizing and offered that I live with her, which I accepted and I forgave her. I ended up moving in with Denise and we rode the same bus and her parents let us share the same bed. Sharing the same bed and sitting next to each other on the bus was nice, I enjoyed it.

Chapter 13

I lived with Denise for like all of my life from then on. We went through 7th grade as a couple. In 7th grade not as many people hated us and gave us rude looks. On the bus, even the jock-ish kids said hi, in a kind way. I only kind of grew out of my emo phase. I still liked the style and music but I was more happier than I was. I think it was all thanks to Denise.

Chapter 14

In 8th grade Denise and I were still a couple. Now nobody gave us rude looks. Nobody hated us. Everyone said hi to us where ever we were. Life was great. I still only liked the emo style and music, but I started to mix happier stuff into to my playlists and style. All because of Denise.

Chapter 15

During the summer after 8th grade, Denise and I planned to move to San Diego for high school and college. We moved into our own apartment. We bought a dog and a cat. We both took the art path as our career. We decided to become manga creators. High school wasn't too tough for us, especially since we were still dating.

Chapter 16

We had still kept in touch with Xerenity and Hazel and eventually they moved into the apartment next to us. Hazel and Xerenity were still dating and had recently bought a Pomeranian. Our pets got along together perfectly. Our "mini huskie" Cam and our tuxedo cat, Bella were best friends with Hazel and Xerenity's dog, Michu. Life was yet again perfect.

Chapter 17

We all graduated high school and all of us except Xerenity went to college. She wanted to stay home with the pets. Hazel took up cooking and me and Denise obviously took up art but I also took up music. Everything was perfect. A good relationship, a nice home, good friends and pets.

Chapter 18

Life for me was great. I ended up proposing to Denise and she said yes. Hazel and Xerenity already got married. Our pets had babies, so now we were grandparents. Me and Denise got an anime based off of our manga. Hazel has her own cooking channel. Xerenity works at the animal shelter. I wouldn't give this up for anything.

Chapter 19

Life is at peace now. Denise and I got married. Our pets babies had babies so we're great grandparents. Denise and I have lots of successful manga's and anime's. I made it big as a singer and songwriter. Hazel has a cooking T.V show. Xerenity saved tons of animals. We all moved out of the apartments and into actual houses, next to each other. Life certainly has changed since kindergarten.
THE END

Chapter 20

Author's Note

All the characters in this story are based off of real people, however some of the events aren't true. Kindergarten to 5th grade events are true. Lost schedule in 6th grade is true. Denise visiting San Diego was true and the I love you equation was true and the people saying Denise and I would be a good couple was true. All other events are fictional.
