Introduction

Two girls, Lola and Beatrice, meet each other at a park and start chatting. Eventually, they fall in love with each other and begin dating. There are some problems along the way. Lola's parents are VERY homophobic, and Beatrice's parents just got a divorce, and she didn't want to give them any more big news to think about. And the girls want to keep their sexuality and the fact that they're dating a secret. So what happens when they have to announce what's really going on between them?

Chapter 1

Beatrice was taking her little brother, Jake, to the park. He was going crazy at home, and Beatrice couldn't handle it any longer. The minute they reached the park, Jake ran away, and Beatrice plopped down on one of the many benches. She pulled out her phone and starting texting her boyfriend, Tyler, whom she'd only been dating for a week.

She said "Hi".

Tyler replied back. "Hey".

"How are you?"

"I'm good, what about you?"

"I'm ok, I guess. I had to take my brother to the park. Ugh!"

"Ha, fun.?"

"Yeah, not really lol.?"

"Well anyways, I miss you Beatrice. You're so beautiful.?"

Beatrice paused. She didn't know what to say. The truth was, she was only dating Tyler because she was super popular and she would've felt bad if she had turned him down when he asked her out. So she said yes. But nobody really knew the truth about Beatrice. She wasn't straight, like everyone thought she was. No.

Beatrice was actually bisexual.

Chapter 2

Lola was so bored. It was a beautiful summer afternoon, and she was spending it indoors, playing board games with her mom. She had been playing different games for the past hour, and now Lola was tired of spending time inside.

"Uh, Mom, I think I'm gonna go to the park. For some fresh air." she said.

"Alright, sweetie, but be back before supper." Lola's mom said.

"I will." Lola grabbed her sweater and left the house.

She arrived at the park.

"Hmm," she muttered. "Where is there a bench?"

When she spotted one, she ran up to it before anyone else could steal it. Someone was already sitting on it, but they were on one side, and there was room for Lola on the rest of the bench. Plus, all the other benches had been taken. This was the best she would get.

Lola sat down and looked around.

"Hello," said the girl sitting next to her.

"Oh, hi," Lola replied. "I'm sorry. Do you mind me sitting here?"

"No, not at all," the girl answered. "I'm Beatrice. What's your name?"

Lola smiled. She was already making a friend. "I'm Lola," she said. "You look familiar. Do I know you?"

"Probably." Beatrice said. "You look familiar, too. Maybe we go to the same school?"

Lola thought. "Yeah, maybe."

She looked Beatrice up and down. As a lesbian, she usually did this with other women. Beatrice noticed Lola looking at her and smiled. "Like what you see?" Then she laughed. "I'm just kidding."

Lola looked sheepish. "Sorry," she said quietly. "It's just that I'm... gay. I know that's not a good excuse, so I'm sorry."

Beatrice's smile faded away. "Oh, it's okay. I'm actually bi."

"Really?" Lola asked.

"Yeah," Beatrice said. "You know, even though we just met, I feel like I've known you for a long time."

"Me too!" Lola said. "By the way, you're really pretty."

"Thanks," Beatrice said. "You're not so bad yourself."

Lola laughed. "I like you."

"Right back at you," Beatrice replied. "Hey, I'm about to break up with my boyfriend because I think I have a crush on someone else."

"Oh?" Lola asked, smiling. "And who would that lucky person be?"

Beatrice smirked. "Well, she's sitting right next to me, and she has the prettiest blue eyes and the brightest blonde hair."

Lola smiled, touching her golden locks.

"Are you gonna break up with your boyfriend in person or by text?" she asked.

?Probably text.? Beatrice answered. ?He looks so cute when he?s sad, and if I broke up with him in his face would most likely change my mind.?

?Oh.? Lola said. She waited for a few minutes while Beatrice texted Tyler. After the breakup, Beatrice looked up at Lola and kissed her.

Chapter 3

The two girls had been dating for a few months now and we're getting more intimate with each other as each day went by. They weren't afraid to kiss in public, but only in places where they're schoolmates didn't hang out at. Turns out, Lola and Beatrice DID go to the same school. They had biology and history together. But no one at they're school knew that they were dating. It was a complete secret. However, one day, Tyler walked up to Beatrice. He looked mad. He was never usually angry with anyone. So it was pretty surprising for Beatrice to see him so upset.

"What's?" Beatrice started.

"Why did you break up with me?" Tyler interrupted.

"Tyler, that was months ago," Beatrice said. "Why are you now questioning this?"

"To be honest, I don't know," Tyler said. "But I've been thinking. And I realized that I've done nothing wrong to upset you to the point where you'd want to break up with me!"

"Tyler, I didn't break up with you because of something you did," Beatrice said.

Tyler looked confused. "You didn't?"

"No," Beatrice said. "I broke up with you because I had a crush on someone else. I didn't think it was fair to be dating you if I liked another person."

"Oh," Tyler said. Then he looked right into Beatrice's eyes. "Who did you like?" he asked.

"Ummm..." Beatrice said. "Just some boy... from another school. You probably wouldn't know him."

"Trust me, I pretty much know everybody," Tyler replied.

"Well, I don't think you'd know this guy," Beatrice struggled to say. She tried to come up with a logical excuse, but nothing came to mind.

"Beatrice, who do you like?" Tyler asked again.

Chapter 4

Beatrice took a deep breath. "I like Lola."

Tyler was shocked. "Lola's a BOY?"

"No, that was just an excuse." Beatrice answered. "I like Lola. Lola Sparksdale."

"Lola? She goes to this school, doesn't she?"

"Yeah."

"Oh. Okay."

"Yup."

"Why do you like a girl? Are you gay or something?" Tyler asked.

"No, I'm bisexual."

"Oh, okay."

"Don't tell anyone, okay?" Beatrice said suddenly.

"You've got my word," Tyler said. "Thanks for telling me the truth."

Beatrice smiled. "Of course."

She hugged Tyler, then left to go to her next class. Tyler watched her walk away and smiled. He still secretly liked Beatrice, but he understood that she wasn't interested in him.

Chapter 5

After school, Beatrice and Lola went into the forest behind the park they met at. The forest was one of the many places they went to when they wanted to be together. Before they did anything, they looked around, making sure that nobody was in the forest. When they were certain it was empty, they began kissing, and soon they were making out. They were so in love with each other, and they made a pretty cute couple.

Lola and Beatrice dated for many, many years until Lola proposed to Beatrice.

?Yes! Oh my gosh, yes!?! Beatrice had said.

The two went on to get married, buy a house, get great jobs, and even adopt kids. They adopted a boy named Logan, a girl named Sidney, and a non-gender specific child named Alex. They even bought a cat named Lily and a dog named Shelby. The two had an amazing life together, and they lived happily ever after.
