Introduction

I'm not a producer, I just have tips for you guys.?

Chapter 1

You wanna be a producer? Well, you don't necessarily have to know music theory. It helps, but it's not vital. Your song quality completely rests on your shoulders. Also, vocals/vocal chops are a "cheat code," as a dude named Zac said on a website. (I can't remember what the website was.) You should also listen to music. That doesn't mean "ooh I'm gonna lock meself in me room 24/7 all year listening to EDM." No. You'll just die of starvation and probably go insane. Also, you should at least watch or be at a studio sit in with a pro.

YouTube. A few dudes can help you, just search The Producer School, Busy Works Beats, or Andrew Huang.

Use FL Studio. Dude. This is one of the best DAW things out there.(???) You'll see what I mean.

Produce for at least an hour every day. If you stop producing for even a week, you'll lose your touch even if you don't publicly release music.

Family members love to listen to your music. (, Hopefully.)

THANKS FOR READING CAN'T WAIT TO HEAR YOUR SONG also I'm NOT a professional EDM producer.
