Introduction

About just everything

Chapter 1

Preschool

Everything was okay

I had two best friends

We had school together

Everything was okay

Kindergarten

Everyone was friends with everyone

Everything was okay

First grade

Everything was okay

Second grade

Everything was okay

Third grade

I thought I had it bad because I got the strict teacher

Everything was okay

Fourth grade

By the end I finally got tested for the Gifted and Talented program

Everything was okay

Fifth grade

According to my district, after this I was done with elementary, yay

Everything was ok

Sixth grade

Back to elementary

I transferred to my new school, a charter, not in the district

Everything was okay

Not even my ?friends? there I knew before I transferred talked to me

I eventually made friends though

And everything was okay

That year was amazing

So many good memories

And eventually I felt like I had always been there
Got to be a rep in NJHS Everything was okay

Seventh grade

Was excited after an amazing previous year

Made amazing friends, reconnected with ones a grade ahead since 7-8 were somewhat mixed

Participated in the school musical

Was in the musical for my drama class

Was in the National Junior Honor Society, now elected as secretary

Was in student council, now elected as secretary

At church, I was chosen as President over my class in that January

I chose my presidency, my counselors and secretary, and I planned activities and lessons, as I happened to be the oldest in my class, I felt like I was important

Like the girls I presided over looked up to me

But

It

Was

Too

Much

It started draining me faster than I could plug it

I enjoyed everything I did

But the days where I have meetings for NJHS in the morning, student council in the afternoon, a rehearsal, then having to help with the school dance for student council and NJHS just every so slightly started to take a toll

And I tried to still have a social life

And a family life

And relax

And learn Spanish on my own

And do my homework

And school in general

And keep my room clean

And deal with my worsening breathing problems

And deal with my now apparent non-diabetic hypoglycemia

And get enough sleep despite likely having a disorder

Oh and did I mention softball?

At some points in the third quarter I realized I don't have to deal with all this crap. I don't have to kill over trying to please everyone
I allowed myself to skip a homework or two when I physically and mentally too exhausted to do anything

Hurt me every time

Then it hit

It closed school, cancelled the production I was in the middle of for theatre class, the one that I had gotten the biggest role I've ever gotten to date in, and suddenly it just dropped everything except school

And everything was okay

Summer

After seventh grade and online school ended

Everything was okay

I couldn't exactly go many places

But that was okay

I could relax

I had more free time

I was free

At least that's what it felt like then

Even better,

My best friend and I grew way closer, at a time where we couldn't even see each other in person

Stay up late texting each other until 1 am

FaceTime each other while we are both making cookies

Everything was okay

Eventually

We both learned

That both our parents

Had decided

To look

Into

Moving.

Thank goodness it happened to be the same state.

It was okay

As long as we both moved, it would only be a three-four hour drive
As opposed to a 10-12 hour drive if we didn't

Everything was okay

We came to each other's houses a lot

We texted a lot

We called a lot

Then she moved
Now she is about to go to her new house

We already decided to FaceTime and call a ton, this relationship isn't dying over someone moving
So it's okay, right?

During this time,
I started online school for 8th grade
At my new school
Yup I decided to transfer again
I transferred before I knew I would be moving by the end of the year if not sooner
Probably would have done it anyway

Classes were fine
A bit annoying having to record myself. Since I happened to get some of the worst classes for online.
But they were classes I wanted.
So it's okay

Now I'm almost starting in person school

I get to be the new girl
It will be okay
Especially if I end up moving in two months anyway

Then I'll get to be the new girl again

That time

I won't have anything to fall back on

I won't know anyone there already

But being the new girl always gives attention to you, helps you meet new people right?

It will be okay

It will be okay

It will be okay

It will be okay

Is it going to be okay?
