Introduction

I'm going to start blogging on here about just life in general. You see, reality isn't always easy, and maybe one day people will confess that in person...

Chapter 1

The confession of a teenage girl (Part 1)

Hey guys! Welcome to my blog!

Feel free to comment your thoughts and ideas below.

When I woke up this morning, I took a deep, happy breath of fresh air. From the moment I opened my eyes, I knew it would be okay. You see, I'm not a morning person. But when I wake up of my own accord and I read a few chapters of my book, I know that whatever happens, I'll be alright. Because most mornings I wake up, and I scream in pain. The thought of waking up at ten to seven to get dressed in my dreary school uniform and be sociable for an entire six hours is enough to make anyone feel depressed. And sometimes the fact that you have to walk a mile and a half to school, it's hay-fever season and your friend is making you wait for him by a bunch of trees is also quite stressful.

Or the fact that you're battling depression and social anxiety and no one knows about it.

I guess that's just reality.

Anyway, I want to end on a happy note.

So, it's not that bad once you arrive at your destination. Your friends make you smile and laugh as you start an intense game of never have I ever, that one annoyingly funny boy in all of your classes is singing and boasting that he knows your full name (you even catch him staring with his immaculately blue eyes).

And then you return home, grab your guitar and play for a few minutes, get changed into a new outfit and head out to dance.

Chapter 1

Hey guys! Thanks for your support! Make sure to share this blog with your friends and comment below!

"We're all mad here"

That's what the mad hatter said in Alice and Wonderland.

I remember reading that book when I was only 10. I found it on the shelf at school. By this point, I'd already read all the horrid Henry's and even a copy of ballet shoes, that was tucked away at the back. I'd sit down at my table and read for an hour, my classmates and my grumpy teacher fading away. Some people have already realised that they're not normal. Because really, I don't think anyone is. You're always going to have an unpopular opinion. If that's pineapple on pizza or that, school is fun. You should see it as a good thing - something that is unique to you. And maybe one day you'll find someone else with the same opinion.

I met someone last year. She was full of joy and happiness, people talking to her 24/7. But I was too shy to talk to her. And then I got the chance. She was hanging out with one of my old friends. That's when our friendship group formed.

And when I woke up this morning, I knew that somehow, I wanted to let the world know that it's okay to be different.

Introduction

Hey everybody! Welcome to my blog! Today I'm talking about my old friend fear.

Warning: mentions anxiety/ and what I think is depression

Feel free to comment your fears and any ideas for my next blog!

Chapter 1

Hey guys! Welcome back to my blog! Make sure to comment and share! Please feel free to chat in the comments, and I'll reply ASAP.

I suppose most blogs tell you where that person goes and what they do that day. Well, so far, I haven't actually done that, have I? To be honest, I actually have told you a lot about myself, just not facts or anything like that. Let me start off the list. I do have fears and worries. I'd be concerned if someone didn't.

I'm scared of the future. There, I said it. I'm scared that one morning I'm going to wake up, and my brother won't be making loads of noise, my parents won't be in the next room, my grandparents will have passed away, and my friends will be nowhere to be seen.

I'm scared of that numb feeling that comes and goes, the one that makes me want to stop living and yet still makes me carry on. I'm worried it will come back again, like always.

I'm scared of my throat closing up and my body shutting down. Being trapped in a crowd, my friends not able to reach me.

I'm scared of myself. My social anxiety, my numb little bug, my panic attacks, my future. Oh, and spiders. They're terrifying.

(If anyone has any topics they'd like me to write about next, please leave a message in the comments)

What are you scared of but have never told anyone?

Hey guys! Welcome to my blog! I've written this one about hobbies and I hope you like it!

Chapter 1

Hey guys! Welcome back! Make sure to leave a comment and share!

I think people underestimate hobbies sometimes. They make us who we are and help us form friendships with others.

Because of the amount of toxicity in people, we're normally worried about things like "Are they caring? Are they there for me? Are they loyal? Are they two faced?"

Trust me. I can definitely relate.

But really, we should be thinking about their hobbies. That's, in a way, how friend groups are formed. Like Marvel and Star Wars? Geek group. Like fashion and trends? Popular kids. Like music and drama? Creative group.

Here are some of my hobbies:

Dance

Playing guitar

Singing

Writing/Blogging (ta da!)

What is yours?

As I was saying, hobbies form who we are. They're what make us different from one another. And yet similar at the same time. They make us happy and want to live every moment doing them!

What are your hobbies?

As usual, if you have any blog ideas, please feel free to comment them!

Introduction

Hey guys! Here is blog 5 (this one is about friendship/prized possessions so is a bit longer than usual)
As usual, any suggestions, please put in the comments!

Chapter 1

Hey guys! Here's part 5! Make sure to comment any suggestions etc!

I'm not going to lie. Friendship has never really been easy for me. I've gone through 2 best friends, and after the second one I gave up. Because I knew who was really there for me.

"If I'm going down, you're coming down with me,"

That's what one of my best friends said to me yesterday. And it's true. Friendships should be 50/50. If it's not, do you really need them in your life? How many friends do I have? More than I used to. How many would I go to if I needed help? 5 of them. Just ask yourself those questions. Trust me.

Friends should make you laugh. They shouldn't make you lose your patience altogether and yell in the middle of the street (true story).

I have a few prized possessions. And the reason why I know they're prized possessions? Because they make me remember the Happy moments.

Are all of your friendships healthy? What are your prized possessions? Here are mine:

A ring that my friend gave me

A pin badge that my friend bought for me

My guitar (obviously)

All of my photos.

See, these may seem worthless to others, but they're not. They make you who you are, like hobbies. They keep you going when times get tough.

If you want any advice, please put it in the comments!

Introduction

Hey guys! Welcome back to my blog! This one is about being friends with boys and having relationships with them!

Chapter 1

Hey guys! Welcome back! Feel free to comment, as usual ;)

Boys take over so many of our thoughts, it should be illegal. I've never hated them, though. Yes, they can act stupid and make you fall head over heels in love, but they actually make great friends. Trust me.

The only annoying part is when people think you're dating.

If you want guys to notice you, honestly, be yourself. Be confident (because you don't need any boys - ha!) and be friendly. I started talking to this boy a couple of weeks ago and ever since he keeps staring at me....

Anyway, boys can be a problem, but they're not as stupid as they let on.

Look for things that you guys have in common (siblings, hobbies, what you watch etc) and start off a conversation. Like friendships and even if you're just talking, these things should be 50/50. That's if your friends or want something more. It shouldn't be "I started the last conversation, so now he should" or "yeah I like him, but I'm not going to ask him that's his problem"

Trust me, I have a friend who would say these sorts of things, and they're still single.

Do any boys stare at you? Are you having boy issues?

So moral of the story, be confident, friendly and try to connect with them!

Let me know how you get on!

PS I'm sorry of the stupid time difference

Introduction

Welcome back to my blog. Please comment any worries or ideas for blogs as usual!

Chapter 1

Hey guys, welcome back! Feel free to comment!

"We are family"

Most of the time, family is the glue that holds us together. It's the literal and mental bond between us. If you've had an argument with friends, your family will still be there at the end of the day - waiting for you to return home.

But when that bond (or glue) starts to crack under pressure, things can get quite stressful. You fall asleep to the sounds of yelling and wake up to a text message from your friend about how they don't get on with their parents. You'll spend the day tired with worry and get home, annoyed by anyone. Your brother will start an argument over nothing, your dad will frustrate you even though he does nothing wrong, and you'll struggle to rebuild a bond with your Mum.

But if you do end up in an argument, remember that you can be the bigger person here. You may not "win" the fight but don't you think that there is something satisfying about saying "look this is stupid. I just need some space" and watching their reaction.

Do you have any siblings?

If you have any worries, please comment them, and I'll reply ASAP

Chapter 1

Hey guys! Welcome back to my blog! Here's part 8

I bet you've heard all the girls complaining about how the boys get all competitive and idiotic, right? Well they're not. (right that is!)

Yes, boys might start to do those things as they step into puberty. Girls, however, do the opposite.

We start feeling insecure (yes, all of us!) about the way we look, our friend groups and our hobbies.

Girls start to gossip and fight for attention.

The other day, my guy friend was pushed over, and my ex best friend ran over to her new BFF, and they were laughing their heads off. And on the way home from school, I decided that I didn't care how much those girls hurt me. They do not hurt people who have always had my back.

Ever since, I've avoided them and ignored everything they've said. Because it's all fake. And so are they.

So if you're making new girlfriends, choose wisely. Introduce them to the people you care about and see how they react. If it's not good, don't bother. In my opinion, having less friends who all have your back is better than lots of "friends" who don't care.

Have you met any toxic girls? How did you deal with them?

Welcome to part 9. Feel free to comment any worries or suggestions as usual:))

Chapter 1

Have you ever gotten this feeling in your stomach as if you can't breathe? It happened to me the other day. I was stood in the corridor outside maths, waiting for class to start. Then this boy came and stood next to me. And that feeling happened. I keep denying any feelings for him... But am I lying to myself?

Have you ever got this feeling where you're laughing like some sort of maniac because you've just realised that whatever you do, life sucks?

Have you ever been invited to something with a person you hate, a person you hate, but you don't know, and your best friend? Well, I have. And I said yes...

Have you ever had that feeling that you're trapped inside your head and no matter how hard you fight it, you'll never be free?

Have you ever felt like no one knows you at all, except from you?

On another note, I have to sit next to that boy today and?

I'm terrified... But mostly excited?

Do you ever get these feelings? Do you think I like this boy?

Any blog suggestions or worries down below!

Introduction

Chapter 1

I'm falling again.

My problems are creating these black holes and I keep tripping up into them. OK. So, here's the truth. Because someone needs to hear it.

I'm supposedly dating this guy. He's my best friend and I really care for him, but....

I'm pretty sure he's lost feelings for me (hopefully) and I've lost feelings for him. How do I know this?

I like someone else. Let's call him mainstream boy.

I see mainstream boy every day. He's in most of my classes. I sit next to him in one of them! Anyway, every time he's around, my heart starts to jump up and down, and it's like I can't breathe.

My friends sit near him as well, and they're always saying how annoying he is (I try to hint and say he's nice, but they ignore me)

So, there's that reality.

Number 2 is that my friends literally start different conversations and exclude me from them. Both.

Please comment suggestions or queries down below.
